

2018 BUILDING WORKFORCE PARTNERSHIPS CONFERENCE

The California Labor Federation's Workforce and Economic Development Program is hosting the 2018 Building Workforce Partnerships Conference on February 6-8, 2018, at the Sheraton Grand Hotel in downtown Sacramento.

This year's conference will focus on the state of regional coordination efforts, continuing professional development for business engagement practitioners, and sector-based career pathways integration across regions. Information will be shared on the following topics:

- Workforce regional initiatives and how to connect in sectors such as healthcare, transportation, construction, manufacturing, and hospitality.
- Technical assistance with the implementation of new tools and resources, including updates to Econovue and the CalJOBSSM Customer Relationship Management and Greeter modules.
- Best practices and progress in disaster response programs after this year's efforts.
- Leveraging community college, K-12, and community-based partnerships to meet the education and training needs of affiliate members.

Local Workforce Development Board (Local Board) directors, members, and staff, as well as business engagement and Rapid Response practitioners are strongly encouraged to attend. Registration information is available on the California Labor Federation website. Hotel accommodations can be reserved on the Sheraton Grand Hotel website or by calling the hotel directly and asking for the Building Workforce Partnerships Conference room rate.

A limited number of scholarships are available to cover the registration fee for Local Boards who need assistance in sending all necessary staff to the training. To request assistance, contact Regional Advisor, Janyce Wong at Janyce.Wong@edd.ca.gov.

If you have any questions, contact Martha Bader at mbader@calaborfed.org or 510-663-4082.
